

Controllers, Society; the methodology

From the witch hunt to the conspiracy theorist purge.

First they tell us the Spirit does not exist, and the physical is all there is. Removing the importance of religion. Or rather, elevating the importance of religious doctrine (for as long as people still care), while denying the existence of the true religious impulse- to know self, truth, reality. Undermining the validity and importance of spirituality in the public sphere. Simply omitting it. (While, later down the line, making everything public, or surveilled, with no 'private' left any more). What is real is what is solid. The body is to be identified with above all else. 5-sensory reality. No subtler reality than that. What of love? Not for the modern human. "True Truth does not exist! Limitation is what is true now!"

Then, later down the line, as we are seeing now, the physical is attacked. Not literally. No, that's the old model. It's more subtle now. We just have it highlighted to us that the physical realm is dangerous. We are diseased. Potentially. The initial restriction into the physical is thereby restricted further. Not only are we ripped out of true spiritual essential life context into a world of physicality alone, but we are now restricted in that physical world. And eventually, with electronics devices and sensors. We have gone from being told 'limitation is all there is,' to being denied what little space we had to manoeuvre in that.

So Life, first reduced to the physical (in our conceptualisations and organising social structures) is then denied in the physical. Stay at home. Social (anti-social) distance. Which means stay apart physically. Even the realm of the limitation is made untenable. Thank goodness the Internet is on and the mind is still free! That is, free to believe in the established narrative and nothing else. 'Truth' is what the algorithms say it is.

So what next? Well, we've got these platforms. The environment is, somehow, well on the way to being totally destroyed, and you can't live there any more, can you? It's not suitable, not habitable. The ecosystems have pretty much collapsed and there are too many chemicals and germs, etc. But it's ok. We knew this was coming, so we've created something for your 'salvation.' Yes, you can be a computer now. You can act like a computer, think like a computer, live like a computer. You already do! Put up with running on command scripts. Entertain viruses. That's allowed- and it's encouraged. It's this pre-made package of liberation/control, just sitting there, waiting for you to join in.

The Internet is you, and you are the Internet. In a horrible, inverted imitation of 'you are Spirit and Spirit is you.' Whatever it is, do it on zoom, do it online, you can live your life there. Just until we've defeated this never-ending virus. It's just a temporary measure. Only 'temporary' can last a long time, and a lot of things can change in that window.

Life, from free and unbounded... to reduced, made less than it was. Than it is.

And then, if they want (not you)... they turn it off.

Life, deleted. (Because you were complicit in its deletion).

~Nathan Godolphin,
24/11/20.